I’ve spent much of the past year talking about self-care and wellness for physicians. It’s so important that we take care of ourselves so that we can be a better doctor, mother, father, friend. Very much like the flight attendant who tells us to put the oxygen mask on ourselves before we try to assist someone else, doctors have to take care of ourselves if we’re to be in any shape to care for others.

I’m excited about the future of our organization and our personal and professional growth. You’ll hear more this October in Phoenix at the Annual Convention about staying true to why you pursued medicine. This is important to remember because by keeping the commitment to our truth, we organically become better doctors and naturally take better care of ourselves—stress flies in the face of a grounded sense of self.

When we follow our truth, we always know the next right thing to do. The Seven Principles of Principle-Centered Medicine

Bylaws Amendments Proposed
The Board of Directors of the American College of Osteopathic Internists has proposed amendments to the ACOI’s Bylaws. The proposed amendments expand the applicability of codes of ethics and professionalism to ACOI members and clarify the application of codes of ethics and professionalism to Fellows, Master Fellows and Honorary Fellows.

The proposed amendments will be considered during the Annual Meeting of Members scheduled for Sunday, November 3, 2019 at the JW Marriott Desert Ridge Resort and Spa, 5350 East Marriott Drive, Phoenix, Arizona.

Letter from the President that I wrote about in my July letter are natural characteristics we all share when we listen to the still, small voice within. And at the core of these principles is number three: practice deep listening. Without deep listening, none of the other principles—or any virtue for that matter—is possible.

What Did You Say?

Listening is to communication what a beating heart is to life: without it, there is no communication. Focused, deep listening greatly impacts our effectiveness as a doctor and the quality of all our personal and professional relationships.

Research suggests that most people really retain only half of what they hear—at most! That leaves a lot of room for improvement. We hope that patients at least hear the most important 50 percent of what we say. As listeners, we must examine what we are hearing, too. Do we hear just the symptoms? Or do we also hear the underlying stress and fear? Do we hear just the medication list and eating habits of patients, or do we also listen to the pain that drives unhealthy behaviors?

When it comes to loved ones, do we hear their cry for help? Or do we hear just the favor they need—again? Do we listen to their need for attention, or do we hear they want even more time and resources from us? Can we even hear our own soul when it pleads for change? Do we listen to our bodies telling us it’s time to slow down or eat more salad?

By improving our listening skills, we get so many benefits. We increase our ability to:

- Persuade
- Influence
- Understand
- Avoid conflict
- Focus on health and well-being
- Create meaningful and pervasive relationships
- Address complexity
- Find and maintain balance
- Create good
- Love

Physician Listen to Thyself

Deep listening requires a high degree of self-awareness. An honest inventory of our communication styles will reveal where we excel and where we may need improvement. Just as it takes a conscious effort to really listen to the entire message that someone’s communicating to us, it takes no small measure of introspection and honesty to evaluate our own listening abilities.

It’s not always easy to avoid distractions or invading thoughts as we listen to another person. It’s hard not to think of a rebuttal as the speaker goes on and on. Sometimes, it takes every ounce of energy we have to suspend judgement, not take statements personally and not let our own personal beliefs interfere with what we hear.

I look forward to exploring the many ways we can become better listeners as we expound and explore the seven principles of Principle-Centered Medicine together. I can’t wait to see you all in Phoenix at the Annual Convention & Scientific Sessions. ACOI prides itself on listening to the needs and goals of its members. Let’s take this even further to the limits of our capabilities. Let’s see what happens when we really mean it when we say:

“I hear you!”

Annette, T. Carron, DO, FACOI, President
A unrem's Administration has announced the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has been directed to take steps to remove non-tobacco-flavored e-cigarette products from the market. This action comes as a preliminary report from the National Youth Tobacco Survey shows continued growth in e-cigarette use by youths. In a statement released by HHS Secretary Alex Azar, “The Trump Administration is making it clear that we intend to clear the market of flavored e-cigarettes to reverse the deeply concerning epidemic of youth e-cigarette use that is impacting children, families, schools and communities.” It is expected that the FDA will announce a compliance policy to prioritize FDA enforcement of the Free Market Tobacco Application requirement. As a resource to clinicians, public health officials and the public, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) also released an official health advisory titled “Severe Pulmonary Disease Associated with Using E- Cigarettes Products” (CDCHealth-00421). HHS Appeals Court Decision on Drug Pricing
As previously reported, the US District Court for the District of Columbia vacated a final rule requiring pharmaceutical manufacturers to include a drug’s list price in direct-to-consumer television advertisements. The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) recently announced its intent to appeal the District Court’s decision. Suit was filed by drug manufacturers arguing that the final rule exceeded HHS’ authority and violated the First Amendment. The rule was issued as part of the Administration’s ongoing efforts to reduce the cost of prescription drugs. The ACOI will continue to monitor this and other efforts to reduce the cost and increase the availability of prescription medications.

Washington Tidbits Controlling Access
When visiting Washington, DC, one can tour the Capitol and explore the House of Representatives. You might even want to get a gallery pass and watch some of the proceedings! In the past, access to the House chamber was controlled by one office, the Office of the Doorkeeper. The Office of the Doorkeeper was the official name established through the approval of a resolution in 1789. Only 34 people have held the position of Doorkeeper. The Doorkeeper operated uninterrupted as the gatekeeper to the House for more than 200 years until the 104th Congress (1995 – 1997). At that time, control of access to the House was given to the Clerk of the House, the Sergeant at Arms and Chief Administrative Officer. It now takes multiple offices to serve as the “doorkeeper” to the House.
Prior Authorization

The concept of prior authorization originated around the expressed theory of ensuring patients received the most effective and appropriate treatment. However, many physicians will tell you that the practice of obtaining prior authorization does little to promote this goal and in practice serves as a barrier to timely and appropriate treatment. In fact, it appears that insurers are trying to keep costs down. This results in driving your costs up, consuming your valuable time, and negatively impacting patient care.

You prescribe medications and direct care using your expertise in consultation with the patient. When the patient’s health insurer flags your care plan you may be informed that prior authorization is needed and that the treatment is not authorized. Sometimes you will be given an explanation and sometimes you may not. I have seen it go both ways, leaving the patient in limbo and in need of care.

I am certain you have seen the notice from an insurer denying care and telling you that a peer-to-peer call is required, taking more time you do not have. You will be placed on hold for what seems like an eternity, only to speak with someone who may not even be practicing in your specialty. All too often I hear physicians complain about the adverse effect this process has on their patients. A survey from the American Medical Association released earlier this year found that 28 percent of physicians believe prior authorization requirements cause adverse events for patients.

While working with physicians in an effort to get a handle on this process, I was struck with the irony that the physician you are talking with in your peer-to-peer phone call is not a peer. The person you need most to understand why you chose the particular medication or treatment plan, can be a physician of a different specialty. Remember this the next time you are on a peer-to-peer call and are denied your request. Ask the physician on the phone what their specialty is and whether they actively see patients. You may want to even consider asking them what specialized training in the area of care they have. If the physician you are speaking with is not a true peer, you may want to explain to them that your course of treatment is mainstream and the proper standard of care. If that does not achieve the desired results, you may want to ask to speak with a supervisor of the type of care you wish to provide. Do not rule out the possibility of requesting to speak with the insurer’s medical director. Consider asking how the determination to deny the care is in patient’s best interest. You may not obtain the authorization, but at least you have raised the question to them and advocated on behalf of your patient. Ask for an explanation from the medical director in writing so that you can place it in the patients file and share it with them to show that you did all you could.

Prior authorization is the bane of many physicians’ existence. I will explore this topic in greater detail in October at the ACOI Annual Convention in Phoenix, AZ. The lecture will address techniques you can employ to help navigate the prior authorization process to improve patient care. I hope to see you there!

Resources Available for ACGME Osteopathic Recognition

As part of the College’s ongoing effort to assist all internal medicine residency programs complete the transition to ACGME accreditation and achieve Osteopathic Recognition, ACOI is pleased to announce the development of an Osteopathic Recognition (OR) Tool Box.

The toolbox includes numerous resources that will help programs through the process. The resources in the tool box may be accessed by here.
Greetings, colleagues, and welcome to the September issue of Talking Science and Education. The leaves are changing, the air is crisp and clear, and the bears are beginning their pre-hibernation feeding frenzy. Vermont in autumn is incredible.

Last month we asked by what percent was child poverty reduced between 2017 and 2018? Children in poverty decreased six percent since 2017 from 19.5 percent. Exposure to chronic stress — including unreliable access to food, health care and stable housing — may impair childhood development and affect health into adulthood.

The decrease in children in poverty was not equal across states. Children in poverty is 2.7 times higher in Louisiana, the least healthy state for this measure at 28.0 percent, versus 10.3 percent of children in New Hampshire, the healthiest state for this measure. Since 2013, children in poverty decreased most in Mississippi and Maine, dropping 7.8 percentage points each. Colorado and Oregon declined 6.5 percentage points. Arizona and Georgia dropped 6.2 percentage points and Arkansas by 6.0 percentage points. During the same time, children in poverty increased most in West Virginia (+1.3 percentage points), Delaware (+1.1 percentage points) and Alaska (+1.0 percentage points).

Unfortunately, we had no correct respondents! I invite you all to test your population health knowledge with this month’s question.

In the 2018 survey, cancer death rates showed mixed results. Since 1990, cancer deaths have decreased by 5%; however, cancer death rates have increased in how many states?

Talking Education
Interactivity in CME: Not So Hard, but So Important

Continuing Medical Education (CME) is considered a lifelong process for doctors as part of their commitment to provide optimal care for patients. Despite a long history of creating CME activities, outcomes are far from ideal. A qualitative study published a few years ago in the Journal of Advances in Medical Education & Professionalism sought to clarify the barriers impacting effectiveness of CME activities in Iran based on the experiences of general practitioners. Putting aside potential cultural and systems differences, the researchers’ findings support much of what we know – but don’t necessarily act upon – in the design and implementation of CME.

The investigators recruited 16 general practitioners to participate in in-depth interviews and field observations concerning experiences with CME. The study was performed using a qualitative content analysis method.

The participants’ experiences revealed a number of barriers, particularly insufficient interaction with the instructors; additional problems included the teachers’ use of an undifferentiated approach; unreal and abstract CME; and ignorance of the diverse reasons to participate in CME.

Based on the study results, there appear to be multiple barriers to effective implementation of CME in Iran and, I believe, universally. The key barriers include insufficient interaction between the trainees and providers, which must be considered by all medical educators and program designers. Such interactions would facilitate improved program design, invite more specific tailoring of the education to the participants, allow for more effective educational methods and set the stage for outcome evaluation from the learners actually applying their new knowledge in practice. These findings are consistent with other outcomes on the efficacy of CME, but provide an important reminder that “the same old same old” is simply inadequate.

Diabetes Dialogues
Is Diabetes Becoming Mainly a Third World Problem?

Global rates of incident diabetes seem to be on the decline in some populations, although experts question whether the evidence could be considered “definitive.”

Based on a systematic review of 47 studies, 36% of age- and ethnicity-defined populations in nations around the world saw drops in incident total diabetes or type 2 diabetes rates from 2006 to 2014, according to Dianna Magliano, PhD, of Baker Heart and Diabetes Institute in Melbourne, Australia, and colleagues.

Populations with declines in diabetes incidence after 2005 included the U.S., Israel, Switzerland, Hong Kong, Sweden, and South Korea. During the same 2006-2014 time period, incident diabetes held steady for 30% of global populations, including Canada, Italy, Scotland, Norway, non-Hispanic white people in the U.S., and the U.K. A third of populations saw an increase in diabetes, including Portugal, Denmark, and Germany, Magliano’s group reported.

However, most of this data is almost exclusively reflective of high-income countries. Also, “stricter and more accurate diagnostic criteria” will inevitably reflect an even greater decline in incident diabetes.

While we all hope for signs that diabetes is in retreat, in my opinion, this systematic review does not provide definitive evidence that true incidence is finally falling. Conditions are very different in low- and middle-income countries, less than five percent of the populations studied, where type 2 diabetes develops at lower body weights and the impact of marketing Western food on diabetes incidence has not yet peaked.
The review drew upon population-based cohort studies, administrative and health insurance databases, and other diabetes registries to accumulate data on 121 specific adult populations. Not all populations had available trend data for all the time points assessed by Magliano’s group, particularly low-income countries. While some studies included in the review reported trends on both type 1 and type 2 diabetes, the researchers pointed out that the findings apply predominantly to type 2 diabetes.

Although the lack of data for non-Europid populations leaves global trends in incidence unclear, these findings suggest that trends in the diabetes epidemic in some high-income countries have turned in a more encouraging direction compared with previous decades.

They noted that from the years 1990 to 2005, 66% of global populations saw an increase in incident diabetes rates -- accounting for the biggest spike of diabetes rates -- juxtaposed by only two percent of populations noting a decline. During these years, 32% of populations saw a stable rate of incident diabetes.

Regarding the spike in diabetes incidence from 1990 to 2005, the researchers explained that the diagnostic threshold (ADA) for fasting plasma glucose dropped from 140 mg/dL to 126 mg/dL (7.8 to 7.0 mmol/L) in 1997, potentially contributing to an increase in incident diabetes cases at this time.

Additionally, around 2009 and 2010, HbA1c was introduced as a new diagnostic standard for diabetes. Evidence from some studies suggests that the HbA1c diagnostic threshold detects fewer people with diabetes than do the thresholds for fasting plasma blood glucose, potentially leading to a lowering of incidence estimates. However, across multiple studies, prevalence estimates based on fasting plasma glucose only versus HbA1c definitions are similar.

From 1960 through 1989, 36% of populations saw an increase, while most populations held stable with new diabetes diagnoses during this time (55%); and only nine percent of populations saw a drop in diabetes rates during these years.

Some of the reasons for the current fall in diabetes incidence may be attributed to heightened prevention efforts, increased awareness, and reduced sugar intake, according to the authors.

Another potential explanation for declining or stable diabetes incidence after the mid-2000s is a reduction in the pool of undiagnosed diabetes through the intensification of diagnostic and screening activities and changing diagnostic criteria during the previous decade.

NOTICE OF AMENDMENT TO ACOI BYLAWS

The Board of Directors of the American College of Osteopathic Internists, Inc. (ACOI) has proposed amendments to the ACOI’s bylaws. The proposed amendments will be considered during the Annual Meeting of Members scheduled for Sunday, November 3, 2019 at the JW Marriott Desert Ridge Resort and Spa, 5350 East Marriott Drive, Phoenix, Arizona.

The proposed amendments expand the applicability of codes of ethics and professionalism to ACOI members and clarify the application of codes of ethics and professionalism to Fellows, Master Fellows and Honorary Fellows. The proposed amendments to the Bylaws are underlined, italicized and appear in bold below:

ARTICLE II: MEMBERSHIP

Section 2. Active Members. Active membership in the College shall be available to physicians who possess the United States degree of Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine (DO), or Doctor of Medicine (MD) (or a recognized international equivalent), and who:

1. Possess a valid license to practice in the state in which they practice;
2. Are of good moral character and conform with the Code of Ethics of the American Osteopathic Association and other applicable codes of ethics and professionalism as determined by the Board of Directors;

ARTICLE III: FELLOWS, MASTER FELLOWS AND HONORARY FELLOWS

Section 1. Requirements for the Degree of Fellow. The Board of Directors may award the title of “Fellow” to one who meets the following requirements:

1. Certification by the American Osteopathic Board of Internal Medicine or the American Board of Internal Medicine;
2. Active ACOI, Inc., membership in good standing for the two-year period preceding nomination;
3. Possession of active medical license in good standing;
4. Demonstration of continuing professional accomplishments and scholarship;
5. Documentation of continuing professional activities, which may include teaching, membership and service to regional and national professional organizations, hospital committee work, research, participation as both teacher and student in continuing medical education activities, significant achievement in the practice of osteopathic medicine and service to the public and community.

To be considered, a candidate must be nominated by a fellow of the ACOI, Inc. and endorsed by a second physician colleague, who may or may not be a fellow of the ACOI. The primary proposer must submit a substantive letter addressing the character, ethics, professionalism and professional achievements of the candidate, including contributions in clinical, teaching or research areas. The letter must make specific reference to the above-listed criteria and describe those attributes and activities which make the candidate deserving of this honor. The secondary endorser must attest to these attributes and activities by signature on the nomination form.

Section 3. Honorary Fellows. The Board of Directors may by unanimous vote award the title of Honorary Fellow to individuals manifesting exceptional concern, skill or ability in areas related to health, education, and public welfare. The Board of Directors may by unanimous vote rescind the title of Honorary Fellow for cause.

Explanatory Statement—For many years, ACOI members have been expected to comply with the Code of Ethics of the American Osteopathic Association. A review of that document by the Board of Directors found that it does not address many of the ethical questions arising today. The Board proposes this amendment to the Bylaws to allow for consideration of other applicable codes of ethics in cases where the AOA Code of Ethics is silent.

The current ACOI Bylaws are available at https://www.acoi.org/about-acoi/bylaws.

Interview: Samuel K. Snyder, DO, FACOI, ACOI President-Elect

Meet Samuel K. Snyder, DO, FACOI, an Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Medicine at Nova Southeastern University-Kiran C. Patel College of Osteopathic Medicine in Fort Lauderdale, FL. He formerly served as the program director of the internal medicine residency at Mount Sinai Medical Center there. Sam is board-certified in internal medicine and nephrology. He has been an Active ACOI member since 1986 and received the degree of Fellow in 1995. Sam was first elected to the ACOI Board of Directors in 2009 and has represented the ACOI and AOA since 2015 on the ACGME Intern specialist Residency Review Committee. A member of the ACOI’s Executive Committee and Research Committee, he has lectured numerous times on nephrology topics for the College. Sam served as the Program Chair for the 2015 Annual Convention in Tampa. He will assume the ACOI Presidency at the close of the 2019 Annual Convention in Phoenix.

Ms. Ciconte: Why did you become an ACOI member? How have you benefited from your membership over the years?

Dr. Snyder: I joined the ACOI many years ago after I completed my residency for the collegiality, educational opportunities, and the ability to meet colleagues in osteopathic internal medicine in order to build ongoing relationships. The continuing medical education courses that the College offered were of great interest even before my career led me down the path as a medical school educator. Over the years, I expanded my network of colleagues and grew professionally through ACOI’s educational offerings.

Ms. Ciconte: Tell me why you have dedicated your time and talents to ACOI.

Dr. Snyder: Osteopathic medicine has given me a lot. I come from a family of DOs as my Dad was a DO. When I was nominated to join the ACOI Board of Directors, I thought it would be a great opportunity for me to turn my involvement into leadership and service.

Ms. Ciconte: In addition to sharing your time and talents with ACOI, you have made financial contributions to ACOI over and above your dues, including a generous contribution to the 75th Anniversary Campaign. Why did you choose to make a gift? What do you think ACOI should do and say to encourage members to support the College financially?

Dr. Snyder: The ACOI and osteopathic internal medicine have never been more successful, while at the same time experiencing more challenges to our survival. I supported the 75th Anniversary Campaign because I believed, as an ACOI leader, I needed to serve and give.

My message to the ACOI membership to encourage them to support the College financially is this: “We’ve been working very hard to clarify and articulate ACOI’s mission and goals to meet the needs of our members – education, influence, and the voice of osteopathic internal medicine physicians. We can’t do it alone. It is a team approach that requires financial support from our members.”

Ms. Ciconte: The single accreditation system goes into full effect in 2020 when you will be ACOI’s President. The ACOI Board has worked diligently and strategically these past few years to address the impact of this critical change. How do you feel about the work the ACOI Board has done?

Dr. Snyder: Our Board has been very foresighted and clear as to ways to address what our members need. ACOI may be the “little guy,” but we have used our voice over the years to make a difference for osteopathic internists. The single accreditation process should not be feared or avoided. We need to work hard to distinguish ourselves, while the College acts as a conduit for meaningful communications with our allopathic colleagues. I believe this change provides a better means for the osteopathic internal medicine to thrive in the future.

Ms. Ciconte: Given the challenges facing osteopathic internal medicine, what does ACOI need to do to continue to serve its members in the future?

Dr. Snyder: First, I feel the College needs to continue to raise funds to supplement our regular revenue streams. We need to enhance our communications with members. Our members need to know that they will get the same quality of educational programming and services going forward. ACOI’s new look and brand will be revealed at the convention in Phoenix next month. Another area to focus on is to try to make the AOA certification process as open and welcoming as possible.

Ms. Ciconte: Any closing comment or thought?

Dr. Snyder: As I am soon to assume the duties of ACOI 2019-2020 President, I am pleased to have such a great ACOI Board and staff to work with. The College will begin to implement its new concept, entitled Principle-Centered Medicine, a powerful approach to redefining Osteopathic Medicine for the 21st Century which our members will learn a lot more about at the upcoming convention. We will also be facing some transitions in membership for our allopathic colleagues and in the College’s leadership.

Ms. Ciconte: Dr. Snyder, ACOI is indeed grateful to you for your long time commitment, leadership, and generosity.

Add Your Name to Leave a Legacy

Members of the ACOI Legacy Society have done their part to ensure the future of the College. A special thank you to our Charter Members!

If you are not a member, please look at the names listed and consider adding yours to those who have made a provision in their estate plans, typically with a bequest provision, that will provide support in the future.

It will bring you peace of mind knowing that you have done your part to ensure that those who will enter the profession in the future will have access to the same education, support, and mentoring that you have received. Think of it as paying your dues forward with a bequest of $10,000 or more, leaving a legacy and mentoring those you will never know but who will provide future generations with the kind of patient-centered care that you have built a career providing.

New members will be recognized at the 2019 ACOI Convention in Phoenix. Be among those who will receive a certificate and a unique crystal memento that shows that you have proudly made an investment in the future of the profession.

If you would like to have the ACOI planned giving consultant talk with you about creative ways you can join the Legacy Society now and receive a lifetime income, please contact Brian Donadio via email at bjd@acoi.org or call 301-231-8877 to let us know how and when to contact you.

Using Life Insurance as a Charitable Gift

When the original purpose for a life insurance policy may no longer apply—such as educating children now grown, or providing financial security for a spouse now deceased—your policy can become a powerful and simple way to support our work. There are three ways to give life insurance to ACOI:

Name us a beneficiary of the policy. This gift is as simple as updating your beneficiary designation form with the policy holder. You can designate ACOI as the primary beneficiary for a percentage or specific amount. You can also make us the contingent beneficiary so that we will receive the balance of your policy only if your primary beneficiary doesn’t survive you.

Make an outright gift of an existing policy. You can name ACOI as owner and beneficiary of an existing policy that you no longer need. You qualify for a federal income tax charitable deduction when you itemize on your taxes. If you continue to pay premiums on the policy, each payment is tax deductible as a charitable gift when you itemize.

Make an outright gift of a new policy. You can take out a new policy and irrevocably name ACOI as the owner and the beneficiary of the insurance contract. This method may be particularly attractive for the younger donor. Whether you make one single premium payment for the policy or pay annual premiums, each payment is tax deductible as a charitable gift when you itemize.

Three ways to learn more about using Life Insurance as a Charitable Gift:

1. Stop by the Development table at our 2019 Convention in Phoenix.
2. Attend the ACOI Legacy Society reception on Friday, November 1 from 2-3 PM (If you plan to attend the reception, kindly RSVP to Susan Stacy susan@acoi.org).
3. Call Brian Donadio at 301-231-8877, or send an email to bjd@acoi.org.

Please remember - always, seek the advice of your financial or legal advisor to determine the best gift for your individual circumstances.

These guides have ideas and strategies about:

• Giving Securities • Maximizing Tax Savings • Giving through a Will • Gifts to Provide Income • Charitable Gift Planning • Gifts of Life Insurance

During the Annual Convention in Phoenix

“A Fresh Perspective on Estate Planning”
SUNRISE SESSION 7 AM - Friday, Nov 1, 2019

Estate Planning is not typically a priority on most individuals’ to do lists. And the title of our ACOI Convention session – Estate Planning – is not very exciting. That said, you are invited to take a moment to consider this thought:

“You want to take care of people, but also the causes in life you care about.”

In this sunrise session, Barbara L. Tesner, CFRE, will provide you with the opportunity to view charitable gift planning through a new lens. It’s not just about calculating how much to give.

The session will begin with a brief exercise to engage you to think about estate planning in a new way. After the exercise, the Art of Gift Planning will be discussed, including an overview of charitable gift planning options and vehicles:

• What should I give? • How should I give? • When should I give?

In general, the Session Objectives are:

1) Learn the elements of effective gift planning
2) Understand ways to “Gain through Giving”
3) Be inspired with a fresh perspective on estate planning

Please join us for this session if you want to take care of people, but also the causes in life you care about --

SUNRISE SESSION 7-8 AM Friday, November 1, 2019.
