

From President Bulger It's All About the Why

Championing the cause of people and populations is a privilege. It is the essence of why we practice osteopathic internal medicine. It is why we get up in the morning. It is why we go to meetings to be better osteopathic internists. It is why we share our time and talents with trainees. It is why we belong to the ACOI.

On a trip to Italy this summer with my family, I was struck by the prominence of the notary guild hall in the main square in Bologna. Guilds were associations of artisans or merchants who controlled their craft in a particular town. Guilds were focused on their members, for mutual aid and protection.¹ While guilds gave rise to universities, including in Bologna, they generally do not exist

Letter from the President

any longer. One reason that they ceased to exist is that their focus was inward, on their own existence, rather than outward. Their why was egocentric.

Andrew Taylor Still founded osteopathic medicine “to improve our present system of surgery, obstetrics, and treatment of diseases generally.”² Osteopathic internal medicine focuses on the treatment of diseases of the adult. Dr. Still’s why was directed outward. Dr. Still founded a profession, not a guild. As a profession, our why is bigger than us. Our why is about others. It is focused on the people and populations we serve.

Osteopathic internal medicine provides benefits for those we serve. This is part of our why. Much debate exists regarding measurement of distinctiveness. It is important that we codify the attributes so they can be spread. It is also important that we understand that “not everything that can be counted counts, and not everything that counts can be counted.”³ Some part of the distinctiveness is sharing within the family of osteopathic internal medicine. Giving back is part of the why and inherent to a profession.

Osteopathic internal medicine continues to thrive. As osteopathic internal medicine looks to the future, we will continue to be faced with important decisions. Our deliberations must be grounded in our why. We must always ask ourselves what is best for the people and populations that we serve.

I am proud to be an osteopathic internist. I am honored and humbled to lead the ACOI. Why do I lead, why do we do this? We do it to improve our present system of care for the people and populations we serve.

well attended, with 600 or more physicians typically present for the plenary sessions. In particular, a vascular medicine symposium and a cardiology symposium saw standing room crowds. Other sessions attracted hundreds of attendees throughout the week.

During the Convention, the College began the celebration of the 75th anniversary of its founding in 1941. A “Hall of History” was put together by Director of Administration and Finance, Susan B. Stacy, FACOI. In it, attendees could view early photographs and convention programs from the ACOI archives. The anniversary celebration will continue over the next year. A history of the College, authored by Kevin P. Hubbard, DO, MACOI, is among the activities planned. Members in attendance were also very generous in their contributions to the ACOI’s Generational Advancement Fund, and the new 75th Anniversary Circle, which has as its goal the preservation of distinctive osteopathic internal medicine practice as the profession transitions to allopathic accreditation of its residency programs. The Generational Advancement Fund provides assistance to residents and students in the form of textbook vouchers and stipends to attend the meeting, among other things. There were approximately 335 residents and fellows and 40 students in attendance.

White House Announces Efforts to Address Prescription Drug Abuse and Heroin

The ACOI and nearly 40 other provider groups support efforts announced by the White House to stem prescription drug abuse and heroin use. President Obama traveled to West Virginia to hear firsthand about the toll drug abuse and heroin use is taking on Americans and their families, while straining law enforcement and treatment programs. During his visit to West Virginia, the President announced federal, state, local and private sector efforts aimed at addressing the prescription drug abuse and heroin epidemic. As part of the effort, the ACOI and others will work to train more than 540,000 health-care providers in opioid prescribing over the next two years. Groups such as CBS, ABC, the New York Times and others will donate millions of dollars in media space for PSAs about the risk of prescription drug misuse.

In addition to the efforts of providers and other organizations to address the drug abuse epidemic, the President issued a memorandum to federal departments and agencies. The memorandum directs federal departments and agencies to provide training on the prescribing of opioids by federal health care professionals who prescribe controlled substances as part of their federal responsibilities. Further, the memorandum directs federal departments and agencies that directly provide, contract to provide, reimburse for, or otherwise facilitate access to health benefits, to identify barriers to medication-assisted treatment for opioid use disorders and develop action plans to address these barriers.

CMS Issues Final Rule Impacting Stages 2 and 3 of the Meaningful Use Program

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) recently released a final rule modifying Stage 2 and implementing Stage 3 of the Meaningful Use (MU) Program. The MU program is an incentive program created in 2009 to promote greater efficiency and improve patient outcomes through the use and adoption of certified electronic health records (EHRs). The program was designed to be implemented through three stages over five years.

In an effort to remove some of the perceived barriers to successful reporting, CMS shortened the 2015 (Stage 2 MU) reporting period from a full year to 90 days and reduced the number of objectives required for eligible professionals to successfully participate in the incentive program. In addition, in response to concerns raised by the ACOI and other physician groups, mandatory participation in Stage 3 will be delayed until 2018 with optional participation in Stage 3 for 2017. CMS signaled additional changes to the rule may be forthcoming. The final rule provides an additional 60 days for public comment. You can learn more about the MU program and provider requirements at www.cms.gov.

The Office of National Coordinator for Health Information Technology concurrently issued a rule addressing the certification of EHR technology. The ACOI and others continue to express concern with the reporting program and the certification of EHRs. You can view a copy of these and other comments submitted at <http://www.acoi.org/advocacy/legislative-and-regulatory-comments.html>.

Bill Introduced to Expand Open Payment Reporting Requirements

A bill was recently introduced in the Senate to expand reporting requirements under the Open Payments Program. The proposed legislation would expand the current reporting program to require applicable manufacturers to report payments made to physician assistants, nurse practitioners and other advanced practice nurses. The reporting program was created under the Physician Payment Sunshine Act, which was included in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) to promote transparency. According to CMS, under the current reporting program there were more than $6 billion in financial transactions between drug and device manufacturers, physicians and teaching hospitals in 2014. You can learn more about the Open Payments Program by visiting www.cms.gov/openpayments/.

ACA Case Continues in US District Court

As previously reported, the US District Court for the District of Columbia ruled that the House could proceed in a lawsuit brought against the Obama Administration challenging the legality of using unappropriated funds to implement the ACA. In an effort to end the legal action, the Administration appealed the decision to allow the case to proceed. In a setback for the Administration, a judge refused to certify the case for appeal prior to the issuance of a final judgment. As a result of this most recent ruling, the case will continue to proceed in the US District Court. The ACOI will continue to monitor this case and its potential impact as it works its way through the judicial system.

HHS Awards Funds to Expand Primary Care Workforce

The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) announced the award of more than $240 million to expand the primary care workforce under the National Health Service Corps (NHSC) and NURSE Corps scholarship and loan repayment programs. The funds will provide: new awards to students pursuing primary care training leading to a degree in medicine, dentistry or a degree as a nurse-midwife, physician assistant, or nurse practitioner; new awards under the NHSC Student-to-Service Loan Repayment Program for medical students in the last year of school; and new awards to educators to serve as faculty and eligible health profession schools, among other things. Additional information is available at www.NHSC.hrsa.gov.

She has over 30 years of experience in all areas of medical practice, including coding and billing. Additional information on these and other topics are available at www.acoi.org and by contacting Ms. Young at YoungMedConsult@aol.com.

Low Utilization of Chronic Care Management Codes Seen by CMS

According to CMS, doctors are not taking advantage of the new code for chronic care management services. American Medical Association Current Procedural Terminology (CPT) code 99490 was implemented to improve care and reduce hospital readmissions and overall costs by providing a per-patient per-month payment for non-face-to-face chronic care coordination services. According to CMS, it has received 100,000 reimbursement requests for an estimated 35 million eligible beneficiaries. Concerns have been raised by the physician community that the complexity of compliance has steered doctors away from the program. As a result, of the intent of the code and the limited utilization to date, CMS is trying to raise awareness and interest among Medicare beneficiaries and providers. To learn more about chronic care management services visit www.cms.gov.

Texas Osteopathic Medical Association Installs Steven Gates, DO as 115th President

ACOI Member Steven L. Gates, DO, FACOI of Corpus Christi, TX, was installed in August as president of the Texas Osteopathic Medical Association (TOMA). Dr. Gates is certified by the AOBIM in internal medicine and geriatrics. He assumed the presidency at the 2015 Texas Osteopathic Medical Association's annual convention in Corpus Christi.

"I was born to be a DO, and am proud that the profession is very well situated for the future of medicine," says Gates. "Already one of every four medical school graduates are DOs and we will impact patient care. By applying our philosophical tenets to our patient's needs, we will show the world how to truly practice Ideal Patient Care."

Dr. Gates is the Vice President of Graduate Medical Education and also holds the positions of Director of Medical Education, Designated Institutional Officer, and Internal Medicine Residency Program Director at the Corpus Christi Medical Center – Bay Area. He is also the vice-chair of the Texas Medical Foundation Health Quality Institute.

In addition to the ACOI, Dr. Gates is a member of Association of Osteopathic Directors and Medical Educators (AODME) Board of Trustees. He has been a leader and mentor training medical students and residents for over 17 years. During his career, Dr. Gates has held numerous leadership roles within TOMA and the American Osteopathic Association (AOA). Dr. Gates Chairs the AOA's Bureau of Osteopathic Medical Educators and serves on the AOA's Bureau of Medical Education and Council on Osteopathic Postdoctoral Training.

Interview with Jack D. Bragg, DO

Why Supporting the ACOI is Important

(This is one in a series of interviews with ACOI members who are strongly committed to the College and why they believe it has made a difference in their lives. This series is presented by Barbara L. Ciconte, CFRE, Development Counsel to ACOI.)

Meet Jack D. Bragg, DO, FACOI, Associate Professor of Internal Medicine, Division of Gastroenterology & Hepatology, University of Missouri-Columbia School of Medicine. A former member of the ACOI's Board of Directors, he served as President in 2011-2012. Dr. Bragg has volunteered on a number of ACOI committees, including the Program Committee, Ethics Committee and currently the Development Committee. He participates in the College's Visiting Professor Program and is a nationally-known speaker in gastroenterology.

Ms. Ciconte: Tell me why you have dedicated your time and talents to ACOI.

Dr. Bragg: Given ACOI's size, I saw that it was able to utilize the skills and knowledge of its members in order to get things done that would benefit the members and the internal medicine profession. I thoroughly enjoyed my years of service on the ACOI Board because the Board was committed to govern and had the authority to determine what the College needed. We then acted in partnership with the senior staff to accomplish those goals.

Ms. Ciconte: How can ACOI continue to serve its members in the future?

Dr. Bragg: I realize there is some uncertainty as to what the future might hold for the ACOI due to the changes associated with the single pathway for GME accreditation. For that reason, I believe we need to continue doing what we have done well in the past. This includes quality CME sessions at the annual convention, our advocacy efforts in Washington, DC, and the recertification work we do. The College is a leader and has demonstrated forward thinking for internal medicine. This is needed now more than ever.

Ms. Ciconte: In addition to sharing your time and talents with ACOI, you are a donor and Charter member of the Legacy Society that honors those who include the College in their will or estate plan. Tell me what motivated you to make a planned gift to the ACOI.

Dr. Bragg: When the ACOI offered a special program to its members to assist them in their estate planning a number of years ago, I was involved at the leadership level and knew firsthand what the College did for the members. I could see that osteopathic internal medicine had a bright future. Including ACOI in my will allowed me to demonstrate my commitment to the College and its future financial security. My annual gifts to the Generational Advancement Fund help ACOI provide support to medical students and residents, which help to advance the next generation of osteopathic internists.

Ms. Ciconte: What can ACOI do to encourage other ACOI members to give annually and consider joining the Legacy Society?

Dr. Bragg: ACOI needs to remind members that they can have a direct impact on our profession. As I mentioned earlier, given ACOI's size, the College is able to utilize the skills and knowledge of its members to benefit the osteopathic internal medicine profession. I always encourage members to get involved on committees which will identify them to the ACOI Board and staff leadership.

Last year, I rotated off the ACOI Board but I must tell you that my experience on the Board and as the ACOI President was truly memorable. I felt a great sense of accomplishment of what the ACOI staff and Board achieved during my tenure in leadership. Members who are involved and see what the College does will understand how important their financial contributions are to the ACOI and give. Service and financial support to the ACOI are wonderful ways to give back.

Ms. Ciconte: Dr. Bragg, ACOI thanks you for the many contributions you have made and continue to make to help the College plan for its future while educating and training the next generation of osteopathic internists.

Tax and Estate Planning Seminar Series Continues

Nationally-recognized planned giving consultant Sandy Macnab, FAHP, CFRE, President, Alexander Macnab & Co., presented “Gaining through Giving - Doing Well While Doing Good,” at a Sunrise Session at the 2015 Annual Convention in Tampa. An appreciative group of ACOI Fellows and other members learned about ways to help themselves, their families, and ACOI while saving income and estate taxes.

The session provided general information on how charitable gifts can help families with tax and estate planning issues. Attendees learned about helping ACOI while reducing income and estate tax liabilities, especially gift plans that benefit donors with lifetime income and that then go on to support ACOI programs.

For those unable to attend the session, brochures describing the plans are available from the ACOI office. Email Brian Donadio at bjd@acoi.org or call 301-231-8877 to request a copy of “The Gift Annuity” or “Remarkable Unitrusts” brochures.

HELP WANTED...

Speaker of the House

Article 1, Section 2 of the Constitution provides, "The House of Representatives shall choose their Speaker and other officers." The Speaker has been chosen 123 times since 1789. With the announced resignation and retirement of current Speaker John Boehner, the House will again choose its leader who is certain to be challenged by both institutional and partisan job requirements.

In the coming days the two major parties will put forth candidates to fill the position of Speaker of the House. The name of each member of the House will be called alphabetically, at which time he or she will state the name of the person for whom they are voting for Speaker. The voting member does not have to vote for a member of the House. A majority of the votes cast will select the next Speaker. The process continues until an individual is selected. The process of selecting a Speaker in 1849 took 63 ballots and three weeks. The process took 133 ballots and two months in 1855. How many ballots will it take to select the next Speaker when the House votes later this month? Stay tuned!
